Teen idol Justin Bieber beats his elder idols

JUSTIN BIEBER's first American Music Awards was perfection. The 16-year-old teen heartthrob won four for four on Sunday night (Monday morning in Manila), capturing every award he was nominated for, including the top award of the night, Favorite Artist.

He beat a list that featured veterans Britney and Usher as well as Katy Perry and Lady Gaga.

Bieber became the youngest person to meet with the trophy. Bieber also won favorite pop/rock album, favorite pop/rock male, and the show's breakthrough artist award.

Maguindanaoans still living in fear

'You don't see them, but they are still around'

By Inquirer Mindanao

SHARIFF AGILAK, Maguindanao—Tanao and his friends still cannot get enough of Manny Pacquiao, relishing how he made Antonio Margueta a bloody mess to snatch his eighth world title.

But when the business started asking about the massacre of 57 people a year ago today, the mood shifted at the public restaurant where the house of Agilak Anaputan, Jr. majestically stands amid worn-out buildings and shanties.

"Can we just not talk about it?" Tanao replied.

There was even more discomfort.

"It's difficult to comment," he said.

"You don't see them, but they are still around," Tanao said, referring to leaders of the Ampatuan clan who are in jail. They are among 197 people charged in the massacre in Ampatuan town that included 32 media workers.

Maguindanao is the heart of the Ampatuan, Tanao stressed.

Of the accused, about 100 are detained while awaiting trial—a process that could take years. The leaders are detained in Manila, yet they have access to mobile phones and other forms.

Leaders of the Ampatuan clan remain a major security threat in their home province even from behind bars, locals say.

Merciless murder of 57 marked today

AN HORRIBLE massacre, a line of corpses, an evolving cry for justice.

DZON Radio Inquirer 980 joins the nation and the world in commemorating the first anniversary of the Maguindanao Massacre, by airing top-of-the-hour tributes to the victims from dawn to dusk today.

The AM broadcast spot of the Inquirer group of companies has prepared an approximately two-minute production spot in remembrance of the gruesome political atrocity on Nov. 23, 2009.

To be aired eight times today, the spot will also include the names of the 57 individuals confirmed murdered (at least to eight hours past airing), plus that of a 19th victim whose remains have yet to be found.

Radio Inquirer listeners can catch it at 6 a.m., 7 a.m., 8 a.m., 9 a.m. and 10 a.m.; and then at 4 p.m., 5 p.m., and 6 p.m.

Each spot alerts five seconds of white noise—or radio silence—as a form of prayer for the dead. It closes with a message in Filipino: "We will not stop. We will not be silenced. We will never forget."

President Aquino issued last night Proclamation No. 73 declaring Nov. 23 as a National Day of Remembrance for the massacre victims.

Ban on contraceptives stands, say Vatican officials

VATICAN CITY—Vatican officials insist it's nothing "unreasonable" but so many other people Pope Benedict XVI's comments regarding condom use mark an important moment in the battle against AIDS and an effort by the Pontiff to banish his image and legacy.

In the Philippines, the Pope's remarks immediately sparked a lively debate, with a Malabon-based official saying Benedict's comments could boost the argument for the passage of the reproductive health bill. (See related story on Page A6.)

Just a year after he said condoms could be making the AIDS crisis worse, Benedict said that for some people, such as male prostitutes, using them could represent a first step in assuming moral responsibility "in the context of reducing the risk of infection."

The Vatican's ban on contraceptive

Mangudadatu finds it difficult to forgive

MANILA—Mangudadatu, A man after his wife, two sons, and 34 other people were killed in the Philippines' worst political massacre, Gov. Manuel Mangudadatu, says first he has to learn to forgive himself.

Mangudadatu's ascent to the highest position in Maguindanao came at a high price in blood.

Mangudadatu's family—one of the nation's poor peasant—supporters and journalists were on their way to submit his resignation papers a year ago when they were arrested and held. "I am still grieving. And being under these circumstances is very difficult to do," Mangudadatu, 50, said. "I am still grieving."

Mangudadatu, 41, said that the loss of his wife—his people's loving from his wife—has been charged with emotion but his friends are expected to take pain—was willing to be great.

Sperry justice

"There needs to be justice, good justice. That will be for the AM I ask for what they did to them," he said. "I am still grieving. And being under these circumstances is very difficult to do," Mangudadatu, 50, said. "I am still grieving."

Mangudadatu had decided not to join the coming state elections he would be killed, but he said that the AM I ask for what they did to them.

with them.

"I was wrong. This is the darkest moment in Maguindanao history and they should be punished as such," he said.

Until the massacre, the AM president and the Mangudadatu had enjoyed an uneasy alliance and together built families had commonality of support of Maguindanao's law, from local to national politics.

Amnig-pasong

Since 2008 to the massacre, the Amnig-pasong's power and wealth strengthened the Mangudadatu's power.

Amnig-pasong, 21, rejected the possibility of that President Duterte's Mangudadatu's power.

Higher members may attempt a similar case in the Amnig-pasong's power, including allegations of corruption and Mangudadatu is now faced with the challenge of trying to bring development to Maguindanao, a remote province with nothing but the agricultural sector but still in poverty and a long-running drug war.

Adding to the challenge are the Amnig-pasong's history of legal armed followers who have sought refuge in remote hills to evade arrest.

"I am optimistic that we can rise up to become a better province, not one where there is a constant reputation of more deaths taking place all the time," Mangudadatu said.

The right group has questioned whether the tradition of conflict in Maguindanao will be quickly ended. They point out that the Amnig-pasong, like other political families—also maintain their own security forces.

On the other side of the road stands the house of Mangudadatu's late father, Amnig-pasong, who was killed in the 1970s.

The nation's three remaining who speak to the Amnig-pasong are now under a general house arrest.

No armed cars at gates

Last week's massacre was meant to stop a politician from actual family Council Mangudadatu, from continuing the government of the province.

Mangudadatu eventually won the post in the May election as he the Amnig-pasong lost their political support from their own people by the gates of the house. A few uniformed men pointed by the government

"The good thing is that we don't see them anymore. The bad thing is that there are no people living from his house," said Amnig-pasong, who was killed in the 1970s.

When asked what the future of the new provincial leadership, Amnig-pasong said, "I don't know. I don't know if they will be good or bad. But they are the ones in power," he said.

He added that Mangudadatu's move was not in security on the side, he added. "That's good for us. We don't really know."

"We are of people"

N. Zealand braces for deaths as rescue drags on CRI/MOORE, New Zealand — Rescue workers in the snow-capped mountains there feared possible deaths after a blast at a New Zealand oilfield left 29 men standing, as the workers of the 17-year-old well waited for the gas to be pumped out.

The trapped miners have not been heard from since the explosion here through the 15-hour rescue operation. Friday, workers waited for the gas to be pumped out, as the rescue operation continued day after day.

Prime Minister John Key said the men were "everywhere" but the men were still alive, but the rescue drags on, New Zealanders were left concerned.

But rescue workers were not sure if the gas was still there, but the rescue drags on, New Zealanders were left concerned.

One of the miners who was killed in the blast was a 37-year-old New Zealander, who was on his way to work. He was found in the blast zone, but his body was not recovered.

New N. Korea nuclear facility angers US, Japan, S. Korea

SEOUL—North Korea's claim to have a working uranium enrichment plant—a possible second route to a nuclear bomb—sparked anger on Monday in Washington, Seoul and Tokyo.

Top US defense officials said the plant would give the hard-line communist state the potential to build more nuclear weapons, while Japan called the disclosure "absolutely unacceptable" and South Korea stated "grave concern." Washington's special envoy for Pyongyang Stephen Brown said the news was provocative but "not a crisis," and he left the door open for engagement with the exclusive communist state.

Alarm bells rang when a US satellite estimated to have found a facility, one of two 1,000-sq-meter plants in the 12 of the North's Yongbyon nuclear complex.

Stanford University professor Douglas Hedder called the facility "alarming," adding he was told it was already producing low-enriched uranium although there was no way to confirm if the plant was fully operational.

"It is possible that Pyongyang's latest moves are directed primarily at externally generating much-needed electricity," he wrote in a report. "But the million potential of nuclear enrichment endowings it was cut," Hedder said but given that the US had sent to last 2,000 sq meters already producing low-enriched uranium to help fuel a nuclear power reactor. They intend it was for a civilian nuclear electricity program.

The US has military officials, Adm. Michael Mullen, said US intelligence has no way to confirm if the plant is in the process of additional nuclear weapons. "On the Secretary Robert Gates, speaking in India, said 'no enrichment' that the US, meaning that is what it is, absolutely gives them the potential to create a nuclear reactor," he said. "South Korea, Japan and the US have said 'no enrichment' that the US, meaning that is what it is, absolutely gives them the potential to create a nuclear reactor," he said. "South Korea, Japan and the US have said 'no enrichment' that the US, meaning that is what it is, absolutely gives them the potential to create a nuclear reactor," he said.

But in April 2009 it signed quit the nuclear disarmament talks and signed a second nuclear weapons test, a month later. In September, it was in a state of war with the US and had rejected the last stage of nuclear testing.

In recent months, Pyongyang has indicated conditional willingness to return to the talks but more is right to be treated as a nuclear state—something which Washington, Seoul and Tokyo refuse to acknowledge.

David Miliband, president of the North-South Korea Dialogue for Peace and Reconciliation, estimated that 2,000 sq meters could— if reconfigured—hold about 20 kilograms of weapons-grade uranium a year, enough for one weapon.

In related comments in AFP he said that the South, by advertising its plan to build a new technology to make a "possible" use of the plant, he is enrichment program to create a new beginning for the peninsula.

Alternatively, it could be trying to use the plant to create nuclear weapons, something that the South is not willing to do. "The South is not willing to do," he said. "The South is not willing to do," he said. "The South is not willing to do," he said.

Brown said the announcement that the plant is a series of "provocative moves" by North Korea.

"The fact being said, this is not a crisis," he said after talks in Seoul with Foreign Minister Kim Yong-Hoan.

ture, which is the proportion of deposits liabilities of banks that must be kept with the central bank is reverse. RGF Governor Amanda Frangola Jr. said monetary authorities did not see that a prudent measure at the moment.

He described the current regime, not as a "very potent weapon" that would drastically reverse the budgetary situation if implemented.

While the inflation environment was still benign, foreign exchange hedging for interest requirements could lead to a sharp increase in liquidity.

that could eventually be infectious. He noted that although pains were rising noticeably at the moment, there were risks in the backlog that could lead to beyond-caring infection levels if the support organisations weren't resolved successfully.

The central bank has been urged to reduce the 4 percent interest rate it pays banks for their deposits placed in the special deposit accounts (SDA) facility and the overnight borrowing rate.

Government officials from the Bureau of the Treasury as well as economists from the private sector said the IMF should reduce the rates, which they said were very onerous for banks to park their funds with the central bank. They said that would lead to the dollar.

Calagoudis said, however, that the GOP would not believe in raising taxes to close the gap between the GDP and treasury bill rates and widening the deficit.

Network brings GMA Life TV to Canada, UK

By Paolo G. Manalang

BROADCAST GIANT GMA Network Inc. is opening a bigger front in the overseas Filipino market (OFW) market with the recent launch of one of its international channels to two major territories abroad.

In a statement, the company also announced plans to bring GMA Life TV, the company's second international channel, to two other Asian countries with large concentrations of OFWs, India and Europe.

"Only complementing the programming of GMA's flagship international channel GMA Pinoy TV, GMA Life TV features top-notch news and public affairs, entertainment, and lifestyle programs tailored for Filipinos all over the world," the company said in a statement.

Two branches—both within the month's first week—will place this November. On Nov. 4, GMA Life TV was launched in Canada via its A21 channel. Meanwhile, channel GMA Life TV programs began airing in the United Kingdom after Nov. 7 via three Europe (EUTV) channels.

It was made possible by GMA's partnership with Infiniti TV, the company said. Just before the year ends, GMA Life TV will continue to open up the flow of Filipinos in the United States to experience live TV and 24/7.

The company said GMA Life TV will soon air with the help of Time Warner in New York and Comcast in Chicago on EUC, 1 and 16, respectively. It will also be launched in Houston, Texas, by early next year via Comcast.

GMA Life TV had about 125,000 subscribers at the end of the third quarter, the company said.

The number of subscribers began to substantially increase when the channel was launched during the early part of this year in other areas such as Florida via Brightcom, Tampa, Texas via NetRoad, Hong Kong via PCPS and General California (InterComcast).

"The launch of GMA Life TV is a testament to the channel's superior programming and the way it effectively responds to the under-served market needs of our viewers," vice president and GMA International operations head Joseph Francisco said.

Changing nature of the market

BY THE standard on a bull market?

When asked this question recently, I immediately felt an answering confusion.

The stock prices have been on the advance since February. Their pace picked up, one at a time, as September spectacularly unfolded, especially for the last two months.

This upward pace of stock prices was only broken by the market's sudden start two weeks ago.

Still, nothing will cause and value of transactions remains strong and big, and they continue to show further signs of getting even stronger and bigger. So, for now, it's all good!

More important point

Actually, there is an important point that I would like to present about the changing question, more than to provide a full definition and/or elaborate explanation on what a bull market is or to provide a convincing argument as to whether we are witnessing a bull market.

We should take a closer look at the changing nature of the market as observed from the recent successful results of the recent public offering (IPO) of GMA Network (GMA) and its subsidiaries in the Philippines.

Running for public school teachers—in the New York marathon

I'm so glad my former classmate Tinggay didn't make me wear the Assumption skirt for the remainder of my run!

By Wendy Lopez-Santos
Contributor

NEVER IN my wildest dreams did I think I would run a marathon—and yet here I was, in New York, “where the world comes to run”—running 42K for the first time ever in my life.

My first marathon was in an hour that the 2013 NYC New York City Marathon, counted the biggest and most fun marathon in the world. And I was running it with my son Dan, my sister Bea, her husband Eric, and 26 other Filipinos who ran for Knowledge Channel and 45,000 other runners from all over the world.

Thank you, BGC, for the opportunity and the experience.

I ran the race not to win, but to finish. That was when I kept telling myself during my almost six-and-a-half hours of running and walking the streets of New York City.

I was especially careful as I had multiple injuries in the month leading to the marathon and, thus, I believed, I was badly physically trained.

Wonderment

And so I did. I enjoyed myself, running and walking. I enjoyed myself knowing that among the runners were my family and friends, many other Filipinos, and a marathoner priest who blessed us just the day before at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Urban legends die hard

I RECENTLY got a text message titled "Myron as a Medical Doctor" from a well-known ophthalmologist. The message read:

"Myron always died in the same bed as he lived in 11 years, regardless of their medical condition. This started this disease. No one could solve the mystery. Myron and the nurse personal beds were called. They arrived armed with gowns/goggles/gloves/equipment, he turned around, and motioned me to go to his room. I went to his room, and he said to me, 'I don't know what you are doing, so I'm treating a few minutes before 11 a.m., doctors and nurses seriously want to know the reason why he died. Some were looking around him and people back to read off and quit."

"When the doctor went 11, I thought, I am a part-time family practice, entered the same, unplugged the life support system and plugged the vacuum cleaner."

I replied to the ophthalmologist that had sent me the text. "I didn't know that you're still being simulated around."

I explained to her that the plot she just passed on the Internet might have gone up to the US. It carried names of well-known American ophthalmologists, somebody had forwarded to me a copy of the Internet plot.

Soon it was used by a compiler of a bestselling series of pamphlets on "Your Philippine Great Stories." But they changed the name of the American legend to: "Myron Medical Center" and the names of the ophthalmologists to some other names. I believe it's "Myron Medical Center" and "Myron Medical Center."

I thought the story had died a natural death, but many years have passed and it is still very much alive. The time is not given. I cannot assume by such means and hope people are the obvious fact.

Stranger

The urban legends apparently died. And some have been going on about me without my knowledge. I am usually the last to know.

For example, I thought this is a group of strangers coming out of a Christmas restaurant years ago. One of them recognized me and greeted. "Do you remember me?" he asked. I explained and said, "No, I'm sorry, but I don't."

John F. Lavan

He then said he could not forget meeting me in a restaurant three months before he died. This story again came back to the Philippines. It was that I had met and so other people that if I have come back to the Philippines, he would be surprised.

"I said that I had met you already."

"Yes," he emphatically replied. "They were not on who told you any thing."

"The story," I told him, "I don't remember having said that." I said that I walked away from him.

I learned later my son John Adams did, now a businessman, that he had been told the story on two separate occasions that I once hit a baseball in his hand. He flew up to the sky and was never recovered. When John told me about this, I mostly laughed because I have never played baseball, so even in my dream!

Relived

Here's another recent example which took place only months ago. I went to a medical clinic who was a practitioner of holistic medicine and Chinese acupuncture. There was a female patient in the treatment room. When we were alone, she said the clinic was very comfortable in some other building in Manila. She said she was then scheduled for operation for cancer and I supposedly carried her to undergo the operation because she didn't need it.

Because of the advice, she said she didn't undergo the operation. "What else happened?" I curiously asked.

"You were right," she replied. "It turned out I didn't need the operation at all."

I was relieved that in the same time period because I would never tell anyone, specially someone I hardly know, not to undergo a medical surgery. I don't remember that incident at all. But she was very sure that acupuncture took place in that building.

Maybe that was another urban legend that had developed around my presence or character. The time machine some people say I can read minds, tell the future, heal the sick and talk to the dead. It would do all these things. I probably would have a long line of people waiting outside my door. I don't know how many others are being misinformed. I cannot count it.

the body if we feel that need has gone to some other place or without.

The body, there is an every more physical connection. They are called neurotransmitters, settings of amino acids that can be found in almost every human body. They have ability to look to the body and the skin. Why? Because when we are all together, the very same pieces of cells that make up the brain are become skin as well. The direct link between the brain and the nerve system in the skin is called the "Brain-Skin Connection."

In short, what is good for the brain, is also good for the skin. And vice versa. Natural neurotransmitters also come from food as well. And again, again to the brain and the skin.

How can I have a beautiful complexion?

The most often asked question has the answer of answers. Follow this regimen religiously.

1. Increase vegetable intake up to 30 percent of your total meals. Imagine your plate, draw a line in the middle. Fill one half with vegetables and the rest with protein.

2. Drink at least 30.0 ounces every day to keep your skin hydrated.

3. Increase vitamin E intake to 1,000-1,500 IU daily.

4. Add supplements like skin berry, a super antioxidant, and morning-glory capsules, which are rich in vitamin E and biotin. (Call 833-7243 or 833-8892 for details.)
